As a social work student and part of the ALICE population, being able to experience the ALICE Advisory Council, it's really helped complete my education. It's incredible, bringing members of the community together. We're from all over the community. None of them are necessarily my neighbors, but we come together as a community and as neighbors to help solve all these problems that we're all seeing in different ways.

Just by virtue of its name, United Way unites people together. I think that when you're working with people who are all moving in the same direction, then we see success happen. We see change beginning to happen. United Way has kept me engaged because I see that there is real action, real improvement in the community because of those efforts.

Everyone knows United Way as a vehicle for donations. But they're not just funneling dollars to the right places. They're building a framework and a foundation—a network of individuals who want to give their time and their dollars and really make a difference in a different way. For me, as a donor, wanting to make sure that my dollars are making an impact, in the areas I want to be impactful in, that's why I give to United Way.

I want to make the biggest impact on addressing our needs that I can as an individual. But I can't do it individually. I can't make the greatest impact individually. But through United Way, through the multiplication of resources and the collaboration, I can make the greatest impact. And so that's why I choose to be part of United Way.
